IN THE HUDDLE with Melvin C. Lenzy

EA Sports
Product Manager-Madden/NCAA Football

Many colleges have their own unique celebrations. Florida has the Gator Chomp, Texas has the Hook'em Horns, Army does push Ups. Have you brought this tradition into NCAA Football 2005?

That's what college football is about. We have some of the most recognizable traditions in college football in our fan celebrations. We have the Hook' Em Horn's , Texas A&M "Gig 'Em Aggies" and Gator Chomp to name a few. Celebrating with your fans is going to be a cool new addition to this year's game.

New this year is the Program Integrity aspect. Can you briefly describe how it works?

Program Integrity is all about running a clean program. If you have players on your team that are not attending class, as the "coach" of the team and leader of the program, it is up to you to decide what actions are to be taken, if any, against your players. Throughout the year, you have a certain amount of discipline points you can assign should you choose to use them. If you determine to not take action, there will be a certain interest level from the NCAA. This NCAA could choose to sanction you for violations that range from minor to severe punishments. Ultimately, the goal is to run a clean and respected program and march your way to a National Championship.

What online features have you added to NCAA Football 2005?

NCAA Football 2005 is the first EA SPORTS game to be on XBOX Live. Join the largest online gaming community and play as your favorite school with team specific rankings or you can create tournaments (up to 32 teams). Even though we want you to play online all day every day, there is an outside sports world going on, so we have included a real-time sports ticker. The ticker shows the scores for real sports games, just like you'd see on most T.V. sports broadcast, but also include scores of game from those on your Friends List. Lastly we added "Even Teams" where every school in the game has an equally talented roster. So, here you can really use your FAVORITE school without the being scared to face a team full of speed at every position.

It's time to hit the stands and sing the fight song again, so what does EA Sports have in store for NCAA football fans this year?

NCAA Football 2005 is all about Home Field Advantage. For the first time ever in a football video game, the environment and atmosphere around the game directly impacts players on the field. The fans play such a critical part in the college game that we really wanted to incorporate that look, sound and feel into the game. Playing in hostile environments like LSU's Death Valley can really affect a player's composure on the field. So, this year we introduced the "Match Up Stick. The "Match-Up Stick" is used to determine how composed or rattled your players are at any time during a game. The Dynasty Mode was always one of the most popular features of the series.

How have you expanded on it for 2005?

Dynasty Mode has always been one of the features in the game that we want to make as deep and immersive as possible. In recent years, there has been an influx of athletes into college football who may have excelled at multiple positions in high school. So, schools have the ability to just recruit the player as an "Athlete" and take them through their regular program and determine how that player's abilities can best help the team win. This year we allow the user to recruit athletes and then assign them to a position in their off-season training.

In the real game, the college crowd can greatly affect how players perform. For example, the kicker that made a 45 yard field goal in practice might miss the vital extra point in front of 100,000 crazed college fans. How have you incorporated that into the game?

Composure is a huge part of college football and in our game, the Home Field Advantage feature really focuses on this element. We actually incorporated "icing the kicking" this year. If a kicker is bad and you call a timeout, their ratings will go down because they have become rattled. Can you imagine, "....wide right again". On the flip side if the kicker is good, we actually give the kicker a ratings boost.

How will home field advantage effect gameplay? Will players find it much harder to travel to their arch rival's home for a game?

In NCAA Football 2005, and for the first time ever in a football video game, we made the atmosphere (crowd noise, stadium size etc) directly impact players on the field. Honestly, trying to win a game on the road is going to be tough in environments like Top 25 Toughest Places to Play. We have incorporated a new feature hear called the "Stadium Pulse" which allow players to repeatedly tap the L2 button to pump up the rabid fans.
